2013 Tri-Ute Games kick off

Hundreds of young athletes from the three Ute tribes descended on Ignacio July 22-25 for the Tri-Ute Games. The event, hosted this year by the Southern Ute Indian Tribe and coordinated by SunUte Community Center staff, included friendly competition all over town in basketball, volleyball, swimming, cross-country, golf, bowling and skateboarding as well as traditional activities such as archery, hand games and shinny. Drum wins best-ever 8 awards at NAJA

Staff report
THE SOUTHERN UTE DRUM

The Native American Journalists Association on Saturday, July 20 awarded The Southern Ute Drum an all-time high of eight honors in its national Media Awards competition, including a first-place prize for general excellence for the third year in a row.

Three members of the Drum staff traveled to Tempe, Ariz., for the awards ceremony and three-day conference: Media Manager Ace Stryker, Composition Technician Robert L. Ortiz, and Photographer/reporter Jeremy Wade Shockley. Also making the trip were Southern Ute Chairman Jimmy R. Newton Jr. and three staffers of KSUT Tribal Radio.

In addition to general excellence, the Drum team also won first place for best layout in its division for the third year running. The Drum competes against all other newspapers in Indian Country with a circulation of up to 5,000.

Individually, Stryker and Shockley competed in the "associate" categories, which is open to non-Stryker won first and second place for best news story — for coverage of a tribal case before the U.S. Supreme Court and of an endangered fish recovery program, respectively — and first place for best photo for a shot of a White Mesa, Utah, basket weaver.

Shockley won second place for best photo for his shot of a Blues Brothers tribute band at Ignacio Bike Week.

Ortiz, competing in the categories open to enrolled tribal members, won two second-place photography awards. He was recognized in best feature photo for a shot of a Four Corners health walk and in best news photo for a shot of the Stateline Fire last summer.

"It's an honor to be recognized by our peers in Indian Country, but of course we are here first and foremost to serve the tribal membership, not just win awards," Stryker said. "We hope these awards are an indication the Drum is improving and becoming a better newspaper each year."

Previously, the Drum won six NAJA awards in 2012, four in 2011 and four in 2010.

Tribe offers lesser-known private school, elders scholarships

By Fabian Martinez
THE SOUTHERN UTE DRUM

The Southern Ute Education Department offers two scholarships that might not be widely known among tribal members: the private education scholarship and the elders scholarship.

The private education scholarship is offered to tribal children in Kindergarten through 12th grade who live on or off of the reservation. The Education Department will help pay for some of the tuition of a private school.

Students must first be accepted into the private school then can fill out an application for the scholarship.

"Private [school] can address the needs of learning for certain kids better than public school," said La Titia Taylor, director of the Education Department.

The scholarship was first run through the Southern Ute Indian Montessori Academy, then transitioned into the hands of the Education Department.

Students must turn in report cards to the Education Department to fulfill the requirements of the scholarship. The department is considering lowering the age limit to cover preschoolers as a future goal, Taylor said.

The elders scholarship is designed to help elders continue their education under the Adult Occupational Training Programs in the Education Department. It's available to tribal elders 55 and older.

"The scholarship is for those elders who want to keep their minds active," Taylor said.

The scholarship first started in 2006, but has not been widely used, Taylor said.

More information on both of these scholarships is available by visiting the Education Department or calling 970-563-0237.

To Tribal Council members, success means different things

By Ace Stryker
THE SOUTHERN UTE DRUM

The Southern Ute Indian Tribe has invested a great deal over the years to help its students succeed in education — but how do members of the Tribal Council define success?

For many of them, defining success is not a matter of setting benchmarks and measuring which students cross the finish line. Instead, it's a process of evaluating each student holistically. If there are goals to be met, most said, they should be set by the student.

The Drum sat down individually with six of the council's seven members to discuss their personal feelings on the matter.

"It's not that black and white. When you look at individuals, every individual student will want to have a different course they take in life," Council Lady Pathimi GoodTracks said. "I think we sometimes tend to look at success narrowly, and we've got to look at all the other aspects of being a successful person."

Financial success, for example, is one metric, GoodTracks said. But it's certainly not the only one.

"Money isn't everything in life," she said. "Are you grounded spiritually? What about your home life: Is that successful?"

Education encompasses much more than just classes taken during the school day, GoodTracks said. Students should also receive cultural, financial and life skills training to complement academia.

"In doing that, our students will be more prepared in life and be more prepared to be successful," she said.

Vice Chairman James M. Olguin said he hopes the tribe is able to provide its youth with what he called "E-4": education, exposure to the real world, employment and enlightenment. Beyond that, defining success is up to the student, he said.

"All we can really say is we've provided opportunities," he said. "The students themselves, they should be measuring success."

Still, from his perspective, one obvious victory occurs when an educated tribal member returns to the Southern Ute Reservation and is hired by the tribe.

"That's a combination of success between the students and the tribe," he said.

Councilman Aaron V. Torres suggested two ways to measure educational success: happiness and self-sufficiency.

"They're being successful at their job, they're being successful raising their families, being a good person," Torres said. "Those to me are the traits of a successful person."

For Councilman Alex S. Cloud, settling on one definition of success in education is difficult — but a thirst for lifelong learning is one indicator.

"You learn something new every day," Cloud said. "Living your life and being responsible and learning new things can define success."

Because each student possesses a different mix of talents and interests, Cloud said, perhaps the best broad definition is this: "We want our students to reach the highest potential that they can achieve. That's where all these programs need to lead up to."

Council Lady Ramona Y.

The social and the life skills ... can impact the most, positive or negative, culturally and traditionally, it starts inside the house and it's not really a government or tribal thing.

— Jimmy Newton Jr., SU chairman

Eagle said an education has been successful when the student has become internally motivated to overcome obstacles and achieve goals.

"Whether it's going to college, getting a degree, going into that field," she said, "success has different definitions for a Native American."

For his part, Chairman Jimmy R. Newton Jr., success can be measured by the impact one makes down the road.

"Where there's a positive impact on the individual's life, family, career, organization, tribe, surroundings, whatever — if there's a positive impact ... something they've achieved," he said.

Newton said the ability to have an impact depends not just on academic mastery, but on a host of other skills, including social skills, that should be learned first at home.

"The social and the life skills ... can impact the most, positive or negative," he said. "Culturally and traditionally, it starts inside the house and it's not really a government or tribal thing."

He urged tribal members to "live for knowledge" and, once a student's desired education level is obtained, to be patient when seeking work.

"A lot of times we have bachelor's, master's, doctorate [graduates] coming out to the workforce and the tribe — which is great — but understand director positions and supervisor and manager positions don't happen on entry levels," he said. "[Graduates must] continue, just like school, to work their way up."

Recognize there are also other ways to support the tribe, Newton said, such as serving on boards or teaching community classes.

Councilman Howard D. Richards Sr. was on medical leave and unavailable for interview.

NEWS IN BRIEF

AGRICULTURE LAND MANAGERS

The Water Quality Program for the Southern Ute Indian Tribe is now accepting applications for the 2014 Cost-share program. The Cost-share program is aimed at land managers living within the exterior boundaries of the Southern Ute Indian Reservation on the Animas, Florida and Pine watersheds who are interested in implementing Best Management Practices (BMPs) for more efficient irrigation and/or riparian protection/improvements. Majority of costs are covered by the Tribe through conservation agreements in which BMPs such as surface gated pipe, underground pipe and inlet structures, or riparian fencing/off stream watering sources are implemented. Such BMPs limit return flows from irrigated land and restore/protect critical riparian zones, thus decreasing erosion and other pollutants into our local watersheds. Call project coordinator Pete Nylander at 970-563-0135 ext 2214 for more information.

KIDNEY CORNER

Treatment of chronic kidney disease II: Kidney protective therapy

By Dr. Mark Saddler
DURANGO NEPHROLOGY ASSOCIATES

In the last issue of the Kidney Corner, we addressed some of the important ways to treat chronic kidney disease, the condition in which the kidneys' ability to excrete waste products is impaired.

In this issue, we will discuss two groups of medicines that are instrumental in caring for patients with chronic kidney disease: angiotensin converting enzyme (ACE) inhibitors and angiotensin receptor blockers (ARBs). These medicines inhibit the formation of, or the action of, angiotensin, a hormone that raises blood pressure.

The most commonly used ACE inhibitor currently in Ignacio is lisinopril. ACE inhibitors all end in the suffix "pril." An example of a commonly used ARB is losartan. All ARBs end in the suffix "sartan."

ACE inhibitors and ARBs are blood pressure-lowering drugs, used frequently in all types of hypertensive patients, even those who don't have chronic kidney disease. But their benefits extend beyond just blood pressure lowering alone.

They have an independent effect in lowering the pressure in the glomeruli, or filters, of the kidney. This results in long-term preservation of kidney function, but can occasionally cause a short term decrease in kidney function.

Even when kidney function does drop after starting an ACE inhibitor or ARB, the medicine can usually still be continued provided the kidney function does not continue to worsen. In fact, those patients with a short-term decline in kidney function may even have the best long-term protection.

In addition, these medicines can both sometimes cause an increase in the blood level of potassium, an electrolyte that can sometimes accumulate dangerously in patients with kidney disease.

So it's clear that when using these drugs, careful monitoring is needed. However, their long-term benefit to kidney function is substantial, so it's worth trying to use these agents in almost all patients with chronic kidney disease.

One way of monitoring how well ACE inhibitors and ARBs are working is to monitor the amount of protein, or albumin, in the urine. A decrease in the urine protein is a marker of the success of this therapy. The urine protein is often repeated at intervals to confirm that this therapy is achieving the desired protective effect.

Like all medicines, ACE inhibitors and ARBs occasionally can cause side effects. As discussed above, even though they are associated with long-term preservation of kidney function, they can occasionally cause a short-term drop in kidney function.

So the kidney function needs to be monitored carefully during their use. They can occasionally cause a cough (ACE inhibitors more frequently than ARBs). Rarely, people can be allergic to them, resulting in a swelling of the lips or tongue.

This can be dangerous and the medicine should be stopped if this happens.

These useful drugs are also first line agents for treating patients with heart failure. Overall they are extremely valuable agents to protect kidneys and improve outcomes for patients with chronic kidney disease.

NATIONAL NATIVE AFFAIRS

South Carolina Supreme Court denies rights to Baby Veronica

National native organizations to advance Civil Rights lawsuit

By Thom Wallace
NATIONAL CONGRESS OF AMERICAN INDIANS

The South Carolina Supreme Court ruled today to deny the appeal filed by Dusten Brown and the Cherokee Nation of the Court's July 17 order to expedite the transfer of custody of Veronica Brown to the South Carolina-based adoptive couple. One year ago, the South Carolina Supreme Court found that denying the adoption and awarding custody to Dusten Brown was in Veronica's best interests. Today, that same Court summarily reversed that decision based on a two-year-old record and without providing a hearing for Veronica. Jacqueline Pata, executive director of the National Congress of American Indians issued the following statement in response to today's ruling:

"The South Carolina Supreme Court has utterly failed to evaluate Veronica's current best interests in this case and confirmed our worst fears - when it comes to Veronica Brown, standard adoption procedures do not apply. Apparently, the Court believes that there is no need to require the family court to hold a formal and thoughtful hearing to determine what is in Veronica Brown's best interest. Like thousands of Native American children before her, Veronica now faces the prospect of being removed from her Cherokee family, without a formal consideration of her needs, her culture and her well-being. This is an alarming failure of the judicial system, and it represents a grave threat to all children in adoption proceedings, but most notably Native American children, who deserve all the legal protections, afforded any child in this nation.

"The National Congress of American Indians refuses to stand by as the rights of this child are violated. Together with the Native American Rights Fund and the National Indian Child Welfare Association we are preparing to file litigation in order to protect Veronica's civil rights. On behalf of all Native American children, we will pursue every legal option available to us to ensure that standard adoption procedures are upheld in this case.

"Let me add that I believe the South Carolina Supreme Court has shown willful disregard for the facts when it claims Dusten Brown has not been involved in the life of his daughter. On the contrary, Dusten Brown has gone to extensive lengths to maintain his family and to care for Veronica. The Court's willingness to ignore these facts and rush a resolution in this matter is deeply troubling."

2013 Tri-Ute Games

Let the games begin!

The official participant count for this year's Tri-Ute Games was 333, with a fairly even split of more than 100 from each of the three Ute tribes. That made it by far the most popular iteration of the games yet, nearly doubling the previous record of 175 participants. Following each day's competitions, participants gathered for social activities – including a dance and “dive-in movie” night in the SunUte Community Center pool – per the Tri-Ute mission: “to come together as one so our children can get to know each other better, fostering friendship between the ... tribes.” Check out www.sudrum.com or the next issue of the Drum for coverage of the many events, which took place after deadline.

Charles Denny, a former world champion hoop dancer and descendant of the Northern Ute Tribe, performs during the Opening Ceremony.

For the younger kids, a “winterguard” class was available. Participants spent two days learning a routine they then performed at the Closing Ceremony.

Members of each tribe's royalty made an appearance.

SEMI-PRO FOOTBALL

Semipro gridgers now being sought

By Joel Priest
SPECIAL TO THE DRUM

Division, league and — later — Far West Football Alliance AAA National Champions in 2012: Don't tell the New Mexico Titans their brand of ball is any less important than the NFL's.

Especially after the grass-roots powerhouse, top-ranked among the New Mexico Premier Football League's Pecos squads in 2013, recently blanked the Rio Grande Division's N.M. Wolfpack in the loop's June 9 Zia Bowl to finish 11-0 overall.

Whether labeled semi-pro or minor league, it's all just a matter of perspective to players seeking either to build up their gridiron resumes, to return to their glory days, or those simply looking for something competitive to do after work and on weekends.

"Semipro football, in a nutshell, is a team made up of players ... who play for the love of the game," said Dena Guttridge, executive director at the Cortez Area Chamber of Commerce. "They purchase their own equipment, mostly, and pick up their own travel and practice expenses."

"The players are 'professional' because they are expected to play at a high standard within the minor-league realm, and they have to hold themselves to professional standards as in being model citizens," she said. "But it's 'semi,' as the level of play is not the major leagues and as players do not get paid."

The league lacks a crew

"Semipro football, in a nutshell, is a team made up of players ... who play for the love of the game."

— Dena Guttridge, Cortez Area Chamber of Commerce

in southwestern Colorado; the Pine River Valley region's closest is the NMPFL's Bloomfield-based New Mexico Miners, which features a roster heavy with holdovers from the area's predecessors: the Farmington-based Four Corners Roughnecks (Southwest Football Conference 2007-09, NMPFL 2010).

Currently closer to Cortez is the Shiprock, N.M., Sand-Vipers — division-mates with the Miners — who fell to the Titans in the NMPFL's 2011 and '12 title tilts, but who were eliminated by one point in the opening round of the '13 playoffs.

That's not good enough for Guttridge and others who want to see the sport played a lot closer to home. The closest in-state team is the Grand Junction Gladiators, American Professional Football League II champs in '12 and now 7-0 in '13.

"We are considering starting our own league here in the Four Corners area, so as to increase the number of participating teams and also to cut the travel time and expenses that would currently be incurred," Guttridge said via e-mail. "If we are able to successfully start a new league in our area, then we could collectively determine when our season would begin and end."

"We would like to have at least five teams in the region," she said, adding a team is preferably composed of a minimum 35 players, typically between the ages of 18 and 45.

"We have a huge interest ... have a large group of players organizing their own practices to get in shape," Guttridge said. "We have businesses that are seeking us out to find out how they can be sponsors — normally unheard of!"

She said games are usually played on Saturdays or Sundays and a home team would need to secure the use of a home stadium, stadium insurance, an NCAA-certified officiating group, and a name, logo and colors.

Prospective players are asked to each pay a fee of $200, but are also encouraged to seek backing from an employer, friend or relative.

"We plan on making our players hometown heroes and will make every effort to support them," Guttridge said, encouraging those interested in playing or assembling a team to request information by emailing cortezchamber@cityofcortez.com, calling 970-565-3414, or visiting the chamber at 928 E. Main.

STARWHEELS

Horoscopes by "The Star Lady"

♌ LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22)

BREEZY BIRTHDAY WISHES TO YOU, LIONS AND LIONESSES! A brilliant, energizing LEO SUN revitalizes your life this month, and the planets form a liberating pattern designed to free you from old limitations. Unlock your mind LEO, try a new look, be bold, regenerate yourself. A fun-loving NEW MOON in your sign launches a playful liveliness that's perfectly suited to a LEO'S nature. Tilt your head back and roar. This is the month to let your personality shine ... there is no other sign in the Zodiac who can do that better than a LEO! Launch your new Solar Year with confidence.

♍ VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 23)

More than likely you'll be keeping your future intentions under wraps until after the 22nd when the SUN returns to your sign again. Think before you act VIRGO. Meanwhile VENUS enters sociable LIBRA on the 16th and diverts your thoughts to money producing endeavors. Be adaptable and take action promptly. JUPITER in the "hopes and dreams" quarter of your chart is emitting potential opportunity. Friendly conversations can be the bearer of good news, because information can come from everywhere.

♎ LIBRA (Sept. 24 – Oct. 23)

AUGUST is a sociable month for LIBRA'S. Get-together's with old friends, and others in your circle may have you contentedly planning events all month. A very harmonious connection between MERCURY, and URANUS on the 14th reveals new insights regarding partnerships, or other close associations. Reevaluate your long term goals LIBRA. You might come up with better plans on the 21st when JUPITER forms a friendly relationship with URANUS. Now go, and play nice with your friends.

♏ SCORPIO (Oct. 24 – Nov. 22)

The SUN shines high in your chart motivating you to do something productive. This month's planetary blueprint calls for action, and perseverance. You have every reason to believe that you will be successful. Make up your mind to follow a plan through to completion. Try not to get bogged down with fixed ideas, or habits. It's time to sweep away the cobwebs of failed past ventures. The planets are calling for fresh solutions. Think out of the box this month SCORPIO. It may not be easy, but you'll catch on.

♐ SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 – Dec. 21)

Visionary JUPITER links with NEPTUNE, and SATURN, setting up an intense intuitive aura. Tap into your naturally farsighted talents and shift your ambitions to the front burner. Let your instincts guide you SAG. If it's a pleasure trip you're seeking, explore your options regarding the areas you would like to see. Be imaginative. The SUN and MERCURY are transmitting favorable suggestions until the 24th. Everyone in the Zodiac knows that exploration is your middle name. Search for excitement, and earn money too!

♑ CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 20)

Your famous financial savvy comes to the rescue this month. With the SUN amplifying money matters, you might find yourself reorganizing resources. Conserve where necessary. The NEW MOON on the 6th urges you to develop fresh methods regarding spending habits. Not that you ever would blab about it, but it's best to keep your finances private. PLUTO'S continuing trek through your sign is helping to renew your old routines, and steer you towards more innovative techniques.

♒ AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 – Feb. 18)

AUGUST is all about getting along with others. Both of the relationship sections of your Horoscope are being energized by this month's Lunations. You might want to take a clear look at how you deal with social and personal associations. Be objective, and willing to let others shine as well. Remember... you ARE the humanitarians of the Zodiac. Understanding others might sometimes be difficult, but extremely helpful. Aquarian folks know all about making friends. Teamwork and compromise are useful tools.

♓ PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20)

NEPTUNE'S current position in a "Celestial MagicTriangle" sets the tone for the month by promoting more enjoyment in your life. What's more, JUPITER and MARS link with the NEPTUNIAN influence to increase your entertainment options. Later in the month (27th) fiery MARS bursts into the sign of LEO and pressures you to make improvements in your work and health habits. Don't worry Little Fishes ... August won't be as boring as you think. You'll still have ample chances to enjoy summer fun.

♈ ARIES (March 21 – April 20)

The MOON in CANCER might trigger emotional family issues on the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th. Maintain your cool RAMS. It's best to be low key, and resolve disagreements calmly. Your thoughts return to happier and more entertaining notions after the 6th when a compatible NEW MOON, inspires both romantic, and family related pursuits. A harmonious force is preserving a serene atmosphere in matters linked to work and health. Direct your thoughts to the positive, and optimistic view of your daily life. Navigate away from dwelling on the negative aspects. What you put out, is what you get back. Which would you like?

♉ TAURUS (April 21 – May 20)

Renovations might be a part of AUGUST'S events. The focus is on your home base. Family matters, and household honey do's might need your attention. Do your best on the 8th when the SUN, MERCURY, and NEW MOON stir up an edginess that may tempt you to argue with the elders. Keep it peaceful TAURUS. Jovial JUPITER in the communication section inspires favorable conversations, and may help you to find the cheeriest words to soothe, and calm differences before they erupt. Tell a joke, or something.

♊ GEMINI (May 21 – June 21)

A lively trio (THE SUN, MERCURY, and NEW MOON) in dramatic, creative LEO sets fire to your imagination as thoughts begin flowing like the Animas River in springtime. However, not everyone will agree with your opinions. Phone calls, and short trips around town may have you running till the 23rd. Concentrate on one chore at a time. Your patience may be needed on the 11th Twins. Little MERCURY'S encounter with stern SATURN might leave you tongue-tied. Relax GEMINI, by the 14th you'll be chatting up a storm again. Phone some of your relatives.

♋ CANCER (June 22 – July 22)

Congrats CANCER people, you're in a money mode this month. Both earning, and spending, are part of the focal point, and are the basis of AUGUST'S planetary pattern. Hang on to your money MOON KIDS. The SUN and MERCURY in big spending LEO may encourage you to shop till you drop. Fear not, there's also a positive side to this story. URANUS (the surprise planet) triggers promising money opportunities on the 4th and the 14th. It might be helpful to embrace beneficial change.

EXPRESS YOUR OPINIONS

EDNA SHOSHONE HOOD

Edna Shoshone Hood was born on Feb. 22, 1909, and died on May 9, 2005. She was the daughter of Mae Shoshone Gunn, who was a full-blooded Southern Ute Indian.

Edna's family lived in a two-bedroom adobe house on land that is now a part of the town of Ignacio. Ten people lived in this tiny house, and the Ute language was spoken in their home. The land was later sold to the town to buy food and other necessities.

Edna's family traveled by horses or walked, because there weren't any cars.

Edna recalled an early childhood where the family and most of the Southern Ute people were very poor. Their house didn't have running water and was run-down. For refrigeration, her mother would take the perishables and put them in a large bucket and put the bucket in a cold-running spring near the home.

Edna was a woman who had taken to the concept of "self-determination" on a personal level when she was 10 years old. She decided to leave the reservation to get a good education. Her mother didn't want her to leave, but Edna was headstrong, and her mother finally gave in.

She attended St. Catherine's Indian School in Santa Fe, N.M. Edna graduated from Albuquerque Indian School and completed her training and obtained a degree, becoming the first registered nurse of the Southern Ute Tribe.

It takes a student three years to complete the curriculum to obtain a registered nurse's degree.

Edna met her future husband, George, when he was recovering from an appendectomy at St. Joseph's Hospital, and was involved in his medical recovery. They married the following year.

George Hood was one of the first Navajo Indians to graduate from the University of New Mexico, with a bachelor's degree in education in 1932. He was a teacher, rancher and artist.

Edna worked for the U.S. Indian Health Service as a registered nurse and retired after 30 years of service. She later served as a cook at the Southern Ute Detention Center for another 10 years.

Edna and George had three children: Orville, Lorraine and Joyce. Edna was a wonderful mother, grandmother and great-grandmother. Edna lived to see her three children successfully complete their college educations and all of her grandchildren, who became third-generation college graduates.

Edna's philosophy was for her children to become visible role models by completing their education and working for the Indian people's success. Edna and George inspired many of the Ute people and brought positive attitudes of success to many of them.

Edna served on the Southern Ute Tribal Council from 1971 to 1974. She was instrumental in changing the Southern Ute Census blood requirement to one-fourth. Edna served as a role model and mentor to many people on the Southern Ute reservation and nearby town of Ignacio.

1000 Rogues' Quannah Lansing and Conrad Thompson rocked the stage during the "Rockin' for the Cure" show in Durango on Saturday, July 13 at Buckley Park.

Rockin' for the cause

Durango is used to the music scene, but put 10 metal bands in downtown Buckley Park and turn up the volume and you've got reason to take notice. The first annual Durango Rock Fest's "Rockin' for the Cure" raised money to help the fight against cancer. Bands from the Four Corners region took the stage on Saturday, July 13 and made their presence known to help a good cause. Be sure to check out the Metal Heads Against M.S. show at the VFW in Durango Saturday, Aug. 3.
