Air Quality donates monitors to new Ute Mountain program

By Ace Stryker
The Southern Ute Drum

In the spirit of helping its sister tribe, the Southern Ute Air Quality Program transferred four of its air monitoring samplers to Ute Mountain Ute Environmental Programs on Wednesday, June 29 to assist the fledgling effort to develop a similar program in Towaoc.

The PM10 samplers haven't been used in Ignacio since 2006, when the Southern Ute program moved to monitoring smaller particulate matter, known as PM2.5. Prior to 2006, they had been in use since the 1980s. Now they head east to allow the Ute Mountain Ute staffers to better track their own air quality.

"They're trying to start their own air quality monitoring program," said Southern Ute Air Quality Analyst Yolanda Williams, who facilitated the exchange. "It's a start for them."

The transfer follows a Jan. 25 meeting in Ignacio during which Ute Mountain visitors toured two of the Southern Ute air monitoring sites, Ute 1 and Ute 3. Interest in air quality monitoring in Towaoc has been spurred recently by concerns that residents of White Mesa, Utah, could have been exposed to low levels of uranium from the White Mesa Mill, the only privately owned and operated uranium mill in the country.

The Southern Ute program has been helping its sister tribe's counterpart to launch an air quality program of its own.

Following the January tour, Ute Mountain Ute Environmental Specialist Tomoe Natori sent a letter requesting use of the PM10 samplers to begin particulate monitoring on the Ute Mountain Ute Reservation. The move was approved by Randy Brown, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Region 8 project officer, who had the final say because the monitors were initially purchased with EPA funds. Brenda Jarrell, Southern Ute

High temperatures and dry weather conditions have led to an elevated fire danger on Southern Ute Reservation lands and restrictions on burning.

Fire restrictions still in effect on reservation, in county

By Ace Stryker
The Southern Ute Drum

Dry weather and high temperatures mean that Stage I fire restrictions continue on the Southern Ute Reservation into early-mid July, according to the Southern Ute Agency of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The restrictions went into effect at 8 a.m. on Thursday, June 30, limiting residents' plans to light fireworks at home to ring in the Fourth of July holiday — though the annual shows in Durango, Bayfield, and at Vallecito did go off as planned. Many other entities also announced local restrictions in late June, including the U.S. Forest Service, the Bureau of Land Management, the National Park Service, the Colorado State Forest Service, and La Plata, Archuleta, Montezuma and Dolores counties.

On the reservation, Stage I restricts open burning of trash and yard waste, agricultural burning, fireworks, and campfires outside of designated, developed sites — which exist only at Lake Capote, said Rich Gustafson, fire management officer for the Southern Ute Agency.

"Right now we're just continuing with Stage I restrictions," Gustafson said in an interview with the Drum on Thursday, July 7. "Conditions haven't improved enough that we can drop the restrictions."

The agency has put out eight fires on the reservation in the past week, Gustafson said, including two of about 5 acres and two of about 2 acres.

Stage I restrictions have been necessary in nine of the past 10 years, with 2009 being the exception. A dry spell seems to hit the reservation at nearly the same time — late June — each year, Gustafson said.

"It's been like clockwork, almost," he said.

Last year, the agency announced restrictions on June 26. They typically last through the middle of July, he said, but qualified that "each year is different."

This year, the agency has help from a South Dakota crew and three fire engines from neighbor-

Free bison meat available to tribal members

The Southern Ute Indian Tribe's Division of Wildlife Resource Management maintains a small herd of bison for the Tribe's ceremonial, cultural and dietary needs. As a service to the tribal membership, the division makes available bison meat to enrolled Southern Ute tribal members free of charge. Tribal bison are grass-fed at low herd density and are free of artificial hormones and other synthetic chemicals. Bison meat is naturally low in cholesterol and an excellent, healthy alternative to beef. If you are an enrolled Southern Ute tribal member interested in obtaining bison meat for personal use, call the Division of Wildlife at 970-563-0130. Quantities and cuts of meat available may be limited.

The Kidney Corner: End-stage kidney disease II: Hemodialysis

By Dr. Mark Saddler
Durango Nephrology Associates

As discussed in the last edition of the Kidney Corner, "kidney failure" describes the situation when the kidney function is too low to support health.

Another term that means the same as "kidney failure" is "end-stage kidney disease." One option for treatment of advanced kidney failure is hemodialysis. This life-preserving treatment removes toxic substances from the blood of patients. It does not promote healing of the patient's own kidneys, nor does it harm the kidneys, but it keeps people alive and potentially gets rid of harmful symptoms in patients with kidney failure.

Hemodialysis is performed by circulating blood outside the patient's body over a membrane that removes harmful substances by the process of diffusion — the movement of substances from an area of high concentration to an area of low concentration. This diffusion occurs across a membrane that forms part of the dialysis circuit.

A large machine is used to pump the blood, moderate the flow, protect against harmful substances entering the circuit, etc but the membrane itself (sometimes called an "artificial kidney") is only about the size of a rolled up piece of paper.

arm. Needles are placed in the fistula to access the blood for dialysis.

Making a good fistula requires an experienced surgeon and is done in an operating room, though it's only a minor procedure for which the patient is usually not admitted to the hospital. Ideally, a fistula should be placed well before the time that it is needed for dialysis so that it has enough time to develop.

Most fistulas can not be used for at least 3 months after they are placed. Another option for access for dialysis is an arteriovenous graft, also usually in the arm. This is a surgically implanted loop of synthetic material that lies under the skin of the arm.

Grafts are generally not the first choice for dialysis access, because of the tendency for grafts to become infected or to clot. Finally, a central venous catheter can be used for dialysis. This type of access has an external port which is used to connect for dialysis. Unfortunately, this results in a high risk of blood infection, so this is type of dialysis access is only used as a last resort.

In the next issue, we will discuss some more issues related to hemodialysis, and subsequently we will discuss peritoneal dialysis, a different form of dialysis that is done at home, and kidney transplantation.

Hemodialysis is tiresome and difficult for patients because it usually needs to be done for 3.5 to 4 hours, three times per week, and is usually done in a dialysis center. This involves considerable travel time for patients.

Some dialysis patients say it feels like having an extra part-time job since it takes up so much of their time. During dialysis, patients can read, watch television, nap or chat. Durango Dialysis Center, located in Bodo Park in Durango, is an option for dialysis patients in the Ignacio and Durango area.

Performing dialysis requires the presence of a dialysis access: a way of accessing the blood to allow sufficient volume to be delivered to the dialysis membrane. This is best done using a dialysis fistula, a surgically created connection between an artery and a vein, usually in the Health Department receives rural health grant

Media release
San Juan Basin Health Department

Gov. John Hickenlooper announced on Tuesday, June 14 that the San Juan Basin Health Department has received a $49,998 grant to improve health care at their facility.

The grant is part of a six-year, $7.5 million program funded by UnitedHealthcare to encourage the delivery and quality of health care in facilities across the state. This year, UnitedHealthcare and the Colorado Rural Health Care Grant Council awarded more than $2 million to health care providers in 42 counties across Colorado.

San Juan Basin Health Department will be applying the grant funds to strengthening the capacity of the oral and medical primary care services available to La Plata, Archuleta and San Juan Counties.

"By supporting the communities we serve through grants like this and other charitable giving, our company and its employees can help improve the health care delivery system for all Coloradans, especially underserved populations," said Beth Soberg, CEO of UnitedHealthcare of Colorado.

"As we continue toward our goal of providing access to high quality, affordable health care to all Coloradans, it is critical that we support our rural communities," Hickenlooper said. "These investments will have a significant impact on care and on people's lives from Julesburg to Durango."

Vitamin D, the 'sunshine' vitamin

By Brooke Henry
CU Denver PharmD Candidate

Sixty-five percent of Americans don't get enough Vitamin D.

Vitamin D is a fat-soluble vitamin stored in fatty tissue. The body makes vitamin D when the skin is directly exposed to the sun. That's why it is often called the "sunshine" vitamin. Most people meet at least some of their vitamin D needs this way.

For your skin to make enough vitamin D, you would need to spend at least 20 minutes a day in direct sunlight without wearing sunblock. However, this is impractical for many people. Direct exposure to sunlight can cause sunburns and might also increase skin cancer risk.

Skin that is exposed to sunshine indoors through a window will not make vitamin D. Cloudy days, shade, and having dark-colored skin also cut down on the amount of vitamin D the skin makes.

Vitamin D is also found in our diets. Very few foods naturally contain vitamin D. As a result, many foods are fortified with vitamin D. Fortified means that vitamins have been added to the food.

Vitamin D is found in the following foods: dairy products (such as cheese, butter, cream, milk), fatty fish (such as tuna, salmon, and mackerel), oysters, fortified breakfast cereals, margarine, and soy milk (check the Nutrition Fact Panel on the food label).

It can be very hard to get enough Vitamin D from food sources alone. Vitamin D supplements can help ensure you're getting enough vitamin D. The National Osteoporosis Foundation recommends supplementing your diet daily with 400-800 IU of Vitamin D for patients younger than 50 or 800-1000 IU of vitamin D daily for patients 50 or older. Vitamin D supplements are available over the counter, and you don't need a prescription. Check with your doctor to see if these are appropriate for you.

Risk factors for low levels of vitamin D include having darker skin, being obese, having poor dietary intake, being home-bound, working inside all day, taking medications that interact with vitamin D absorption, and experiencing recent falls, muscle pain or chronic weakness.

Benefits of Vitamin D include increased muscle strength, increased muscle performance, and decreased risk of falling. Vitamin D helps the body absorb calcium, allowing us to have strong healthy bones. Vitamin D also helps to prevent bone fractures, may help reduce the risk of diabetes, and may help protect against cancer by helping to reduce the rate of cell turnover.

Take care in hot weather

Media release
Southern Ute Risk Management

When working in the heat, remember to take preventive measures:

- Reduce physical exertion and wear light, loose-fitting clothing.
- Have cool, clean water to hydrate.
- Take breaks regularly indoors or in the shade.

Exposure to extreme heat can cause a heat stroke. Symptoms include the following:

- The body breaks down under heat stress and stops sweating.
- The victim's skin is hot, dry and usually red or spotted.
- The victim may be confused, convulsing, or unconscious.

When these symptoms occur, the person should move to a cooler area, soak their clothing with cool water, and get immediate professional medical attention.

Exposure to extreme heat can also cause heat exhaustion, caused by the loss of fluid in sweating. Have the person rest in a cool place and give them plenty of fluids. Symptoms include extreme fatigue, nausea or headache.

The following is a list of recommended practices:

- Work smart with the fewest steps possible.
- Watch out for heat stress in your fellow workers.
- Take breaks when necessary.
- Know where to go to cool off on the job.
- Drink plenty of water and take breaks.

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency launched on Wednesday, June 29 the pilot year of its Tribal EcoAmbassadors Program, which funds research at tribal colleges and universities to address environmental and health issues affecting their communities.

The program helps professors, students and community leaders to bring environmental improvements to their schools or neighborhoods.

JoAnn Chase, EPA's director of the American Indian Environmental Office, met with the Tribal Environmental Managers Partners Workshop and college representatives to introduce the new initiative and open the application process.

"Building stronger tribal partnerships and cleaning up our communities are two of our top priorities," she said. "Launching Tribal EcoAmbassadors forms an effective partnership where the tribal community can direct EPA resources to the most pressing environmental problems they face, and to start developing solutions."

Applications are being accepted through July 29 from tribal college professors who wish to establish independent study courses with tribal students on issues such as climate adaptation, air quality, water quality, and waste management.

Selected participants will each receive a grant and will be responsible for recruiting qualified students, participating in training sessions led by EPA, producing a report that outlines research, results, and proposed solutions to the chosen topic, and presenting their research at a future meeting attended by both EPA and tribes.

"We have a pretty good relationship with the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe," she said. "One of the first steps was we invited them over. ... The Air Quality Program here has been up and running since the 1980s. We have a lot of experience and expertise."

Williams and Raelynn Torres, a summer worker with the Education Department's Youth Employment Program, helped hand over the equipment to Natori, Dakota Hargett, and two summer interns of the Ute Mountain Ute program.

Also transferred to Towaoc were various spare parts for the monitors.

The Southern Ute Indian Tribe and the Navajo Nation are the only two tribes with robust air quality programs in the Four Corners area.

Jarrell said she anticipates the relationship between the two tribes' programs will remain close going forward. The next big step for the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe is to get its air quality data validated so it can be submitted to the EPA's Air Quality Subsystem Database, she said.

Gustafson said it doesn't look likely that this year's conditions will call for an upgrade to Stage II restrictions, as has occurred perhaps three times in the past decade, but it's also unclear when Stage I will be lifted. Conditions are assessed on a weekly basis, he said.

"That first wave of monsoon season moisture that we're seeing right now kind of takes the edge off," he said. "[But] you never know what the rest of July and August are going to hold."

Fire restrictions also remain in place in La Plata County, said

Butch Knowlton, director of the county's Office of Emergency Management.

"We're starting to see a little bit of rain," he said. "It hasn't done a lot to really help us. We might get a five-minute shower, but two hours later, it's dried out."

Notice of proposed Minor Source Program and request for comments

The Southern Ute Indian Tribe/State of Colorado Environmental Commission is seeking comments from interested persons on a proposed revised Minor Source Program, that is, an air pollution control program that will be applicable to new sources of air pollution located within the exterior boundaries of the Southern Ute Indian Reservation that emit or have the potential to emit regulated air pollutants in amounts that are less than the major stationary source levels set by federal law and that are greater than the minor source thresholds set forth in the proposed Program. For existing sources, the program will be applicable to all sources with emissions units therein operating without federally enforceable emission limitations included in a major stationary source permit. On May 28, 2010, the Commission published notice of a proposed Minor Source Program and requested public review and comment. Additionally, on July 21, 2010, a public hearing was held on the proposed Program. Based on the comments received and at the Commission's request, the staff of the Southern Ute Indian Tribe's Air Quality Program revised the proposed Program. The revised Program was re-published for public review and comment. On April 6, 2011, a public hearing was held on the revised program. Based upon the comments received, the Tribe's Air Quality Program again revised the proposed Program, and proposed some changes intended to close an identified permitting gap. Based on those changes, the Commission has determined that the revised Program should again be re-published for public review and comment.

I. Statement of time, place and nature of rule-making proceeding.

In addition to receiving written comments as provided below, the Environmental Commission will hold a public hearing at the Leonard C. Burch Tribal Administration Building, Buckskin Charlie Room, Ignacio, Colorado, 81137 on Thursday, July 21, 2011, beginning at 4:00 p.m., to receive public comment on the proposed revised Program. The public hearing will be held as part of a regular Environmental Commission meeting.

II. Legal authority under which the rule is proposed.

Legal authority is vested in the Southern Ute Indian Tribe/State of Colorado Environmental Commission by the Intergovernmental Agreement Between the Southern Ute Indian Tribe and the State of Colorado Concerning Air Quality Control on the Southern Ute Indian Reservation dated December 13, 1999 ("IGA"), tribal law (Resolution of the Council of the Southern Ute Indian Tribe # 00-09), State law (C.R.S. § 24-62-101), and federal law (Act of October 18, 2004, Pub. L. No. 108-336, 118 Stat.1354) to adopt rules and regulations for air quality programs applicable to all lands within the exterior boundaries of the Southern Ute Indian Reservation.

III. Deadline for submission of written comments.

Please provide any comments on the proposed revised Minor Source Program no later than 5:00 p.m. on Friday, July 29, 2011. Please submit your comments to Brenda Jarrell, Air Quality Program Manager for the Southern Ute Indian Tribe, by one of the following methods:

- E-mail: bjarrell@southern-ute.nsn.us
- Mail: Southern Ute Indian Tribe/State of Colorado Environmental Commission, c/o Brenda Jarrell, Air Quality Program Manager, Southern Ute Environmental Programs Division, P.O. Box 737 MS# 84, Ignacio, Colorado, 81137
- Fax: 970-563-0384
- Hand delivery: Air Quality Program, Environmental Programs Division, Southern Ute Indian Tribe, 116 Mouache Dr., Ignacio, Colorado, 81137

IV. Summary description of proposed revised Program.

The purpose of the revised Program is to establish a permitting program for existing minor sources and existing major stationary sources that operate emissions units which are unregulated through a federally enforceable permit, and a pre-construction permitting program for new minor sources, synthetic minor sources and modified sources located within the exterior boundaries of the Reservation. The Program authorizes the imposition of emission limits and controls for those sources. The Program also provides a mechanism for a source to voluntarily establish permit limits to become a synthetic minor source.

Minor source permits will include emission limitations, and monitoring, recordkeeping, reporting, and testing requirements to assure compliance with the emission limitations. Unless otherwise specified in the permit, compliance by existing sources must be achieved within three years from the date of permit issuance.

To determine the appropriate level of control and the corresponding emission limitations, the Tribe will require owners/operators to submit a best available control technology proposal for review by the Tribe on a case-by-case basis. In lieu of case-by-case control technology review, the required level of control and corresponding emission limitations may, in the Tribe's discretion, be set forth in a general permit that may be established for various categories of similar sources with similar control technologies and capabilities. A draft General Permit to Construct/Operate Oil and Gas Minor Sources Located on the Southern Ute Indian Reservation is expected to be prepared and proposed by the Southern Ute Indian Tribe for public review and comment once the final, or nearly final, form of the Environmental Commission's Minor Source Program is determined and before the Commission's Minor Source Program is finalized.

Pursuant to the Program regulations, emission sources will be charged an application fee as well as an annual emissions fee for releasing air pollutants into the Reservation air-shed. Fees will be used to fund administration of the Program and allow for the development of other necessary regulations.

The Tribe and the Environmental Commission will enforce civil compliance with the Program. Appealable administrative actions taken by the Tribe will be subject to review by the Commission in accordance with the administrative appeal procedures contained in the Program and the Commission's Procedural Rules.

V. Where a complete copy of the proposed revised Program can be obtained.

A copy of the proposed revised Minor Source Program is available upon request from the Tribe's Air Quality Program Manager who can be contacted by e-mail, mail, fax, or in person at the addresses noted above. The revised Program also is available at the following website: www.southern-ute.nsn.us/air-quality/environmental-commission

Corrections

A front-page photo outline in the July 1 issue of the Drum erroneously said Mark Torres received an award for 20 years of service to the tribe during Employee Appreciation Day. Torres was pictured accepting an award for safety, and will mark his 25-year anniversary with the tribe next year. A photo outline in the July 1 issue of the Drum failed to identify Serena Fournier as the new Jr. Miss Indian Colorado.

Roads renamed to aid 911 responders

By Eddie Box Jr.

Southern Ute Natural Resources

The Southern Ute Department of Natural Resources's Information Service Office will be continuing the addressing project for Southern Ute tribal members living within the boundaries of the reservation.

The longstanding and growing concern is from emergency service providers and law enforcement regarding 911 addressing issues and response time. There are precious minutes lost when emergency response units are dispatched to the wrong address.

The Department of Natural Resources has provided Tribal Council with recommendations and a process to provide physical addresses and facilitate the posting of those addresses at tribal members' residences.

During research, authorities found roads, and will probably find more, that need to be renamed for 911 emergency systems to dispatch emergency service providers to the proper physical address.

The changes are as follows:

- Southern Ute Road 310, currently Mountain View Drive, located off of County Road 314: official change to PowWow Circle. This change is required to eliminate confusion with Mountain View Lane located approximately 2 miles east of Ignacio.

- Southern Ute Road 106, currently End of Trail Drive, which leads to Ouray Cemetery: the new road name is End of Trail. The "Drive" suffix following "Trail" is not 911 standards-compliant.

- Southern Ute Road 173, currently Shoshone Avenue: Road signs are needed at both ends of the road, north (State Highway 151) and south (State Highway 172). There is a Shoshone Drive sign at the midpoint, which will be removed to allow for the entire length of the road be Shoshone Avenue.

- Ignacio Senior Center, currently 115 Goddard Ave.: The center's physical address is wrong. It is changed to 15345 State Highway 172. Proper notification will be sent to residents.

- Candelaria Lane, the road west of Quichas Hills Heights: changed to Las Quichas Avenue. Proper notifications will be sent to individuals living at Quichas Hills Heights Apartments.

- Michael Hubbard, who purchase home located on Candelaria Lane, will be given a corrected physical address at a later date.

Additional information on the addressing project will be sent out to tribal members living within the boundaries of the Southern Ute Indian Reservation. If you have any questions, call Eddie Box Jr., Natural Resources information systems manager, at 970-563-0125 ext. 2232.

Council proclaims Marine Corps League Week

By Ace Stryker
The Southern Ute Drum

The Southern Ute Indian Tribal Council approved a resolution on Tuesday, June 28 proclaiming July 3 – 9 Marine Corps League Week on the Southern Ute Reservation.

The resolution came at the request of Pete Woods, commandant of the league's San Juan Mountain Detachment, which represents local U.S. Marine Corps veterans and their families.

The Colorado Department and Rocky Mountain Division of the league hosted a joint convention at the Sky Ute Casino Resort, and it's customary for the host detachment to request such a proclamation from the local government, Woods said.

"I thought this year it would be appropriate if we came to the tribe," he said.

There are at least 10 Southern Ute marines living on the reservation, according to the resolution.

"Our tribal members ... have served in the Marine Corps," said Rod Grove, veteran service officer for the tribe. "It's fitting that we honor this group for their service."

The resolution passed unanimously.

Council Lady Marjorie Borst, whose family members served in many of the major U.S. conflicts of the 20th century, thanked Woods for choosing the casino as the convention's host site.

WHEREAS, the United States Marine Corps has proudly served this Nation with courage, valor, and honor for 235 years; and

WHEREAS, the Marine Corps League operates as a fraternal organization for Marines to band together in mutual support of each other, the Marine family, and the community of these United States; and

WHEREAS, the Marine Corps League, Rocky Mountain Division and the Department of Colorado has chosen the Sky Ute Casino Resort as the site for its 2011 Division and State Convention, with the San Juan Mountain Detachment as its host; and
